PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Dear fellow members:

As you receive this Newsletter, on the West coast the daffodil and crocuses, our harbingers of Spring, are blooming brightly. This message will point to the current indications of equally promising seasons ahead for our Society and Adlerian Psychology. Since the "We" feeling is essential for appropriate action and commitment, what evidence of its development do we have?

Firstly, members have shown a strong interest in nominating for the Delegate Assembly by filling more nominees than required for vacancies in all but one region. Involvement is indicated by the new memberships, especially in the Participating and Family categories, as well as a significant number of renewals of lapsed members.

Remember our goal of 2,000 by the time of the annual meeting. At the time of going to press, we had 870 members, 1,130 to go!

Secondly, the "re-run" of the Phil Donahue show featuring Bob Powers found the central office deluged with over 700 letters and calls inquiring about Adlerian family education and counseling resources throughout the continent. These letters will be forwarded to the network of local societies. This not only points to the effectiveness of the media to attract people to our work, but also to the need for it. To assist local organizations to continue from this second impressive response, information about a pilot project on radio spots will appear in the next Newsletter.

Thirdly, the balanced budget Neva Hefner reports for the end of 1979 is another sign of sound management and partial recovery from the two financially difficult years. This was accomplished by paring expenditures for Executive Committee, JIP, Regions and Committees and the $4,658.28 ($5,000 Canadian) the Society realized from the fine efforts of the Edmonton affiliate.

Fourthly, planning for the Annual Convention in Amherst began in an atmosphere of social interest with Marie Hartwell-Walker, Lawrence Belove and an enthusiastic interested local group. Further belongingness is anticipated for participants not only through the campus facilities but from a program and workshops directed to the full range of professional groups and interest within the membership.

Each month the reports in the Newsletter from the regions are encouraging and informative. Could there be more direct inter- and intra-regional communication and sharing? Do the other regions receive copies of the "Relay" from Region I? Is it time to consider changing the boundaries so that regions are smaller and more acceptable?

In Edmonton, in discussion with Sydney Roth, he emphasized that COOPERATION BETWEEN THE SEXES was such a timely book that every NASAP member should own a copy. One of my gift recipients, an avid reader, returned from Hawaii to report that he had confined his reading to COOPERATION BETWEEN THE SEXES and that of all the books he has used to spark an interest in and recognition of Adlerian Psychology among his friends and associates, this book was the most useful and appealing. One man's experience, but it indicates confirmation of Sydney Roth's intuition.

Finally, to help me personally with the "We" feeling, I welcome similar sharing and suggestions for this monthly message. Although the Spring flowers are showing their riot of color, at times one can feel alone out on the North Pacific Coast in terms of current NASAP issues.

Very best wishes,

Edna M. Nash, President

Please note: The book referred to above, COOPERATION BETWEEN THE SEXES, is available through the AAI of Chicago, 159 N. Dearborn,

Publications by Members

Spanish Translation

Hugh Allred has received word that Brigham Young University Press recently signed a contract with a publishing house in Spain for the publication of his book, HOW TO STRENGTHEN YOUR MARRIAGE AND FAMILY. It will be translated into Spanish and marketed to all Spanish speaking countries.

HOW TO MAKE A GOOD MISSION GREAT

Hugh and Steve Allred's book, HOW TO MAKE A GOOD MISSION GREAT, which combines Adlerian theory with LDS principles for the purpose of helping LDS missionaries improve their relationships with one another and other people, has been included in a set of seven books called THE MISSIONARY SET. Hugh teaches at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

PARENTS OF TEENS STUDY GROUP LEADERS MANUAL

This Leaders' Manual is designed to accompany TEENAGERS: THE CONTINUING CHALLENGE by Shirley Gould. Ms. Gould has favorably reviewed the material. The Manual describes a 10 session format for the Parents of Teens Study Group and includes handouts, experiential exercises, suggested readings and helpful hints for conducting this type of study group. This Maple Ridge Family Education Center Manual may be obtained from:

Linda King
21489 Cherry Avenue
Maple Ridge, B.C.
Canada V2X 4L5

Cost is $6. Payments should be made to Linda King.

Hyperactive Child

John F. Taylor's forthcoming book, THE HYPERACTIVE CHILD AND THE FAMILY: THE COMPLETE WHAT-TO-DO HANDBOOK, presents an Adlerian approach to discipline and family life, as applied in the case of hyperactive learning disabled children. All of the other books in this area, says Taylor of Salem, Oregon, offer "behavior modification" as the system of understanding and improving behavior and relationships so he is especially excited about being able to present the Adlerian/Dreikursian viewpoint. He hopes it will be marketed enthusiastically by Adlerian groups. Contact him at 1341 Edgewater St. N.W., Salem, OR 97304.

Sibling Research

Mazie Earle Wagner, Herman J.P. Schubert, and Daniel S. P. Schubert of the State University College at Buffalo have been involved in NICHD-supported research aimed at depicting the effects of family size, child spacing, birth order, and sex of adjacent siblings on ability, achievement and personality traits. They recently produced a section on "Sibling Constellation Effects on Psychosocial Development, Creativity, and Health" in H. W. Reese and L.P. Lipsitt (Eds.), ADVANCES IN CHILD DEVELOPMENT AND BEHAVIOR, Vol. 14. New York: Academic Press, 1979.

SUPER-NATURAL HIGHS

Reviews appeared recently in publications of the Veterans Administration and Division 36 of American Psychological Association of the latest book of Walter "Buzz" O'Connell. The APA reviewer stated, "The book is an earthy vision of the possibilities of moving beyond addictions of all sorts, i.e., narrow visions and drugs. To sample some of Dr. O'Connell's aphorisms: 'Don't con the God within.' 'Most people learn to get power in ways which seriously limit their self-esteem and social interest.'

The V.A. reviewer said, "the humanistic depth psychology of the zestful Adlerian is summed up in a litany a la Thomas More, from which we quote a few lines:

Grant me thy grace, good God:
To realize the movements of encouragement:
All I owe anyone, from dogs to gods.

To enjoy and share my foibles, depressions and paranoias as ego-creations which no one can take from me.

After all, why should they, dear God, in a universe that dances with the courage to be imperfect?"

Never Too Young nor Too Old!!

Two letters at the opposite ends of the age cycle came in response to Bob Powers' appearance on the Phil Donahue show. Let them speak for themselves:

Dear Alfred Adler,

I am not yet married or do I even have a child. I am 12 years old. When I do start my family I want to do the best I can. I saw you on Donahue. Could you please send me some information about how to treat your children.

Dear Sirs:

I have just listened to Donahue program where Mr. Powers spoke on Family Counseling. A most enlightening experience. I am 85 years old and mother of 12, 65 grandchildren, 56 great-grandchildren and 2 fifth generation. I like so much further information so I can help my children to do a better job than I did. Spanking should be out and intelligence with love and understanding used.

Please let me get the book or whatever to help. Please let me know the price.

More Donahue Letters

We heard from two people who knew about Individual Psychology some years ago and were glad to hear it is still around!

One was Janet McDowell in Philadelphia who heard Dr. Dreikurs in the 1930's when he talked at Lincoln Centre. The other is Helen Lambert, Carmel-by-the-Sea, CA, who wrote, "I believe my first contact was when I attended some lectures by Olga Knopf at the New School in the Village in New York. Later I did secretarial work for Phyllis Bottome, who was a good friend of the Adlers and helped them get out of Austria when Hitler moved in. She wrote his biography, which I typed for her, first during the war when she couldn't be too explicit about naming names, and another after the war when it could be more detailed....A.E. Forbes Dennis, Miss Bottome's husband, was working with children in London, using Adler's teachings, when I saw them both there in 1960 and 1962. I was really interested that his work may still be carried on some place."

Birthdays Milestones

February 7, 1980 -- Alfred Adler's 110th birthday

(Ed. note--the significant dates came to light when IPNL for Nov/Dec 1979 arrived at the editor's desk this week. Sorry this was not noted in last month's NEWSLETTER so that appropriate celebrations could be held. IPNL Editor Paul Rom suggested reading or rereading one of the works of these men and feeling content that there are co-workers in different countries who practice Individual Psychology and that additional works are being published in this field. Adler Remembrance

The following is quoted in its entirety from the Nov/Dec 1979 issue of IPNL (Individual Psychology News Letter, organ of International Association of Individual Psychology):

Gina Kaus lived in the Vienna of the 20's, participated, together with Otto Kaus, in the lecture-discussions which Adler held in his house and published a Journal for Mothers before she became a well-known novelist. In her autobiography, Und was für ein Leben (And What a Life), Hamburg: Knaus, 1979, (to which Henry Jacoby kindly drew our attention) we find amongst other references to Adler, this paragraph:

"Competing for popularity, Freud was the winner. Here in America each one who is a reader knows his name--but nobody knows Adler. There are hundreds of psychoanalysts in Los Angeles, and all have long waiting lists. Occasionally I talk with patients and convince myself again and again that three-quarters of their analysis consists in the application of Adler's doctrine." (p. 101)

This confirms the correctness of what she heard Adler say in 1935 in a discussion with Freudians in New York: "It is unimportant for me under which names my ideas are used--as long as they are useful for patients." (p.101) (Editor's translation)

We hope very much that many of our German friends will read the whole book. They will find there interesting historical facts and aspects of the life of people who were young when Individual Psychology developed in Vienna and Berlin.

--Paul Rom

Reminder to NASAP members--The IPNL is published 6 times a year at a cost of $7.50 and subscriptions may be ordered through the Editor: Six Vale Rise, London NW11 8SD, U.K.

NASAP FORUM

A Challenge to Adlerians

Submitted by:

Gordon M. Fuller, Director Human Services
Blue Earth County, Mankato, MN

Adlerian psychology, it seems, has been concerned primarily with private practice or educational endeavors. It seems that we need to broaden our perspectives so as not to limit such a significant psychology to these areas. The challenge to Adlerians is to begin thinking toward the effect the principles of Adlerian psychology can have upon public service agencies.

Recent literature (Allred, NASAP Newsletter, November, 1979) has indicated that the terminology of Individual Psychology is limiting and perhaps should be changed to something more encompassing, such as Holistic Psychology, thus suggesting something more than working with an individual. In a human service agency, it is extremely important to think of delivery of service to the community in a Holistic sense. Many areas of service exist in addition to individual psychotherapy and the occasional Family Education Center. Among these are services to foster parents and children, juveniles and adults in trouble, chemically dependent people, families, and a variety of others.

It is extremely important to begin thinking of the psychology of Adler as Adler thought of it; that is, a psychology of the people and to begin to work with the problems of the greater population of people in a fashion that enhances social interest of segments of society beyond those that seek private treatment or are exposed to the advantages of a higher educational institution. Adlerians must begin to think in the broader sense of the public that must be served. Adler worked extremely hard toward a model of public enlightenment through family education centers and public education. His work must be expanded in a more systematic way to include public agencies that serve all segments of society.

The human service professional working in the areas of mental health, mental retardation, chemical dependency, day treatment, social services, financial assistance, and corrections must have an awareness of the principles relating to the Holistic thinking of Adler. The possible impact of Adlerian thinking upon the general public becomes vividly apparent when we consider that in a comparatively prosperous county of 53,000 people that approximately 8,000 of those people are active clients of the human service agency. This figure may be higher in areas of poverty. Further impact may be seen through the educational efforts of Family and Marriage Education Centers and other consultation and education efforts in the communities.

It seems that the psychology of Adler can have a much more significant impact upon the society through the human service agencies that exist in every county in this country.

The message of this short challenge to Adlerians is that we need to begin to pay much more attention to societal needs through public agencies.

Dreikurs worked toward involvement of the public. Pew, in his later years, worked with the public through the human service agency with great satisfaction.

It is time that those of us, as Adlerians, look at the reality of the American society and begin to work with the greater population that Adler, Dreikurs and Pew were concerned about. We, as Adlerians, can have a greater affect upon the society of this country and can affect the social interest of those people that we serve.
