NASAP '97 and What Lies Ahead!

Having just returned from our 45th annual convention in Vancouver, I am feeling my unusual exhilaration and excitement about Adlerian Psychology and NASAP. The convention was a great success on many levels. The Adlerian Psychology Association of British Columbia served as the local committee, chaired by Sheridan Gibbons and their commitment, graciousness, organization, creativity and energy contributed greatly to the overall success of the convention! The attendance figures aren't all in yet, but it looks like we had over 325 attendees and more than met our budget goals.

I heard many positive comments about the quality of the presentations, and four highlights in this area were the first Heinz L. and Rowena R. Ansbacher lecture by Arthur Freeman, the Fireside Chats, and the luncheon addresses by David Lam and Heinz Ansbacher. If you missed the convention, or any of the presentations, they are available on audiotape (see enclosed order form), including Dr. Freeman's challenging comments about increasing our social interest activities and Dr. Lam's talk about enhancing the multicultural involvement in the greater community. The Fireside Chats were videotaped and will be available for purchase in the near future, and we hope to print Dr. Ansbacher's "...Basic Clarification of the Relationship of Individual Psychology to Psychoanalysis" in the newsletter or journal, we'll keep you posted. Plans are underway for next year's convention in Dallas — hope you are planning to attend.

IN MEMORIAM KURT ALFRED ADLER (1905-1997)

On May 28, 1997 -- sixty years to the day after the death of his father — Kurt Alfred Adler, who was seeing patients up until the week before, died at the age of 92. For a few weeks before that, without rancor or complaint, he admitted to feeling unusually, deeply tired.

Small wonder. His life was exemplary in the exercise of every faculty in engagement with the moment, and in the delight of conjunctive and passionate movement toward the goal of human triumph over tyranny, self-absorption, and despair. 92 years of that has to be tiring.

To be in his presence, even as part of a group, was to know, unmistakably, that you were within range of an intense and positive interest. Even when he addressed a gathering one never saw him separated by rank or status, but only as equally involved, adding to the warmth of an assembly by his enjoyment of it.

In conversation with him one felt that no distraction possible could break the spell of his alert attention, his transparent eagerness to be fully there, unwilling to miss a thing. This made for an incomparable charm. Watching him in conversation with a woman, and catching a glimpse of her glowing face, one could only guess at the extent of her pleasure in feeling that there had never been another like her before, nor would there ever be one after.

Jane and I surprised him by showing up at his 90th birthday celebration, two years ago. He embraced and kissed us both, with an unmeasured, unstudied affection "I am a little embarrassed to be 90 years old," he whispered.

He was no embarrassment to the rest of us. Only that he was, at last, so tired persuades us to give our final thanks, to bid him farewell, and to consign him to his rest. Only that.

Robert L. Powers

Kurt Adler was born in Vienna, Austria; received a Ph.D. in physics from the University of Vienna in 1936 and an M.D. from Long Island College of Medicine, New York, in 1941. He was medical director and lecturer at the Alfred Adler Institute of New York for 45 years and practiced at Lenox Hill Hospital. For 39 years he was president of the board of the Advanced Institute of Analytic Psychotherapy in Queens. A charter member of NASAP, he served on its governing body for 26 years, was president in 1962-63 and presented at many of the Society's conventions. He is survived by his wife, Tanya; a daughter, Margot; a sister, Alexandra and a grandson, Alexander.

Adlerian Psychology and The World of Work

By Daniel Eckstein, Business & Organization Delegate

I am writing this invited column as a representative to the Delegate Assembly from the Business and Organization interest group. In this article I will address why I feel Adlerian Psychology is relevant in the work place.

In many ways we in NASAP are just one big "extended" family, complete with all our authority issues ("Don't call us neo-Freudians") and our sibling rivalries ("Who is the next 'Dr. D' anyway?").

Like many multi-generational families, we NASAP folks are continually challenged with finding the proper balance between an appreciation for our history, as well as a new rebellious hybrid pragmatic group who dares discuss the integration of Adler with Gestalt, rational emotive therapy, existentialism, etc. Turning specifically to the B& O interest group, at my first Delegate Assembly meeting in Chicago last November, I did my best to model true political group membership by engaging in the following behaviors:

Making sure I got re-elected. Our group had reached the magical 50 members threshold only to drop below that figure recently, hence endangering our existence as an appropriately sanctioned NASAP interest group, and more importantly, threatening my continued delegate assembly involvement. At the November semi-annual meeting in Chicago, I quickly engaged all my group dynamics wisdom gained from 25 years of academic committee work, by utilizing what I call the "Mighty 7 Dysfunctional D's," namely to delay, deny, dominate, defer, deflect, discourage and/or drop the major issues presented. My veteran colleagues quickly reframed my dysfunctional behavior by employing the "7 Constructive C's" of effective group membership: compromise, caring, compliments, collaboration, consideration, conciseness and constructiveness.

Permit me to conclude with the following observations/recommendations:

(1) Adlerian family systems theory is ideally suited to the workplace. We have a theory that works in the extended job family.

(2) In Megatrends, John Naisbitt aptly observed that "trends like horses are easier to ride in the direction they are already going." So here are some trends:

NASAP Extends Deadline For Executive Director Search

NASAP has extended its applications deadline for an Executive Director until July 18. The search is for someone familiar with Adlerian psychology with experience and skills in managing a non-profit organization, including marketing, public relations and overseeing conventions.

Anyone interested in applying for the position should send a cover letter and resume to the Central Office (address left). If you are interested in receiving copies of the job posting, or have a spot to help us advertise, please contact the Central Office, also.

--News From Members--

Don Dinkmeyer, Sr. is recovering from triple by-pass surgery. He did not suffer a heart attack but chose the surgery as a preventative measure, reports Gary McKay. Cards are welcome but no phone calls, please. Send cards to Don at 4010 NW 99 Ave., Coral Springs, FL 33065.

Amy Lew reports she will be presenting at the Adlerian Society of the United Kingdom's conference this fall in Oxford, England. The Institute for Individual Psychology of Great Britain has also invited her to present a course for parent study group leaders based on the Raising Kids Who Can series developed by Amy and Betty Lou Bettner.

Heinz Ansbacher reports that an Italian edition of his and Rowena's first book has just been published, La Psicologia Individuale Di Alfred Adler. Pier Luigi Pagani, President of the Italian IP Society, provides the introduction and Ugo and Annamaria Teglia Sodini, were the husband/wife translating team who initiated the project with "great enthusiasm and endurance," says Heinz. The new edition is a red-orange paperback.

Helen Graves is the new Director of the Family Education Centers, headquartered in Petaluma, California. She replaces Barbara Mendenhall who served as Director for seven years and will remain active as a teacher and counselor. Helen came to FEC in 1991 as an elementary school teacher and decided she could do more for kids by working with parents. FEC offers parenting classes, support groups and counseling at three locations: Petaluma, Santa Rosa and Sonoma.

Sharon Arkin reports that she has received another grant from the National Institute on Aging to continue her work with Alzheimer's patients at the University of Arizona for another five years. Sharon's interest in helping Alzheimer's victims began ten years ago when her mother, Beatrice, was diagnosed with the disease. Beatrice died last May at the age of 84 but therapy helped her enjoy life seven out of the ten years of her dementia, Sharon said.

Cognitive Therapy Journal To Feature Adlerians

Guest-edited by NASAP member, Richard E. Watts, a special issue of the Journal of Cognitive Psychotherapy called, Adlerian and Cognitive Psychotherapies: Toward an Integrative Dialogue, will be available late this summer. Watts told the newsletter that a copy of the journal can be secured by contacting Matt Fenton at Springer (publisher), phone, 212/431-4370 or Fax 212/941-7842. Many well-known Adlerian writers have contributed to the issue. The table of contents reads as follows:

Roots of Contemporary Cognitive Therapies in the Individual Psychology of Alfred Adler, Richard E. Watts & Joseph W. Critelli; Adlerian Psychotherapy and Cognitive Therapy: An Adlerian Perspective, Len Sperry; Individual Psychology and Cognitive-Behavioral Therapy: A Cognitive Therapy Perspective, Arthur Freeman & Jane Urschel; Adlerian and Constructivist Psychotherapies: An Adlerian Perspective, Bernard Shulman & Richard E. Watts; Adlerian and Constructivist Psychotherapies: A Constructivist Perspective, John V. Jones, Jr. & William J. Lyddon; An Adlerian Reaction: In the Spirit of Social Interest: Dialogue Worth Reckoning With, C. Edward Watkins, Jr.; A Cognitive Reaction: Adlerian Psychology, Cognitive (Behavior) Therapy, and Constructivistic Psychotherapy, E. Thomas Dowd.

a. Human capital as a budgeted item. Movie producer Louis Mayer aptly observed that "The inventory goes home at night." Recently I met with representatives of Singapore Airlines to negotiate consulting possibilities. Their Singapore training facility was truly state of the art, modern beautiful, impressive. "Don't you have trouble selling the concept of training to top management," I asked. "Oh no, it's part of our mission statement," my host replied, proudly pointing to an engraved plaque on her wall, "our company has all our employees participate in training seminars and workshops." Surely that's one reason why they consistently rate at the top of international surveys of customer satisfaction.

b. The shift from management to leadership. Consistent with movements involving women, civil rights, and children, so too workers seek a shift in power over people (manager) to shared power, commitment and vision (leadership). Don Dinkmeyer, Sr. once told me that Adlerian psychology applied to organizations in the 90's is comparable to what we proposed in the 60's to child and family counseling.

c. Feminine Leadership. Adler predicted the women's movement when he described "Masculine Protest," the cultural loss of the value of the feminine contrast to the masculine. Yes, the feminine is rising in business and everywhere. I conclude with a favorite leadership metaphor, a.k.a. Rich Kopp's wonderful book on Metaphor Therapy: Gail Forsythe, Executive Director of organizational learning services at 3M, says, "who is the leader of a hockey team? It switches back and forth depending on who has the puck. And the coach — sitting on the sidelines without skates on! My role as a coach is about three things. Number one is to give the employees the tools they need to do their jobs... Number two is to remove obstacles that hinder team performance; nothing clogs a team's arteries faster than bureaucracy. Number three is to challenge the imagination... The sum of all actions of the coach is to give the team ownership and trust."

So remember... 1). Adlerian theory is ideally suited to business. 2). Join B&O and help me stay in office. (There is no pay but the fellowship is great!) 3). And finally, consider this, there are three kinds of leaders in the world — those who can add and those who cannot.

First Ansbacher Lecturer

The Delegate Assembly (DA), at its biannual meeting prior to the convention, spent most of the time discussing the proposed changes to the constitution (see previous newsletter), as suggested by the Long Range Planning Committee (LRPC). The DA did vote to recommend some major changes to the constitution, which means that the next step is to send out these recommended changes to the membership for a vote. You will be receiving this document, with accompanying rationale, in the summer. Those of you who attended the convention had a chance to discuss these proposed changes at your Region and Section meetings; if you were not at the convention, I urge you to discuss these proposed changes with your delegate(s), LRPC members, and other NASAP colleagues so you can make an informed decision when it is time to vote (changes to the constitution require a two-thirds vote of the General Members voting).

The constitution defines the organization in broad terms, the by-laws discuss more of the specific guidelines. The DA will be discussing bylaw changes at their meeting in November, and you will have a chance to influence those changes in at least two ways: talk to your delegates as I mentioned above, and note your comments on the space that will be provided on the form to vote for the constitution changes. I know this can seem complicated and confusing, please call a delegate or a member of the LRPC and we'll be happy to "walk you through it."

There are some other major changes anticipated in the organization. As you know, we are currently in the process of a search for a new executive director as Neva prepares for her retirement. We were also recently informed that Gerald J. Mozdierz, the journal editor for Theory & Research issues, will not be renewing his term. We have initiated a search for a new journal editor (see article, page six). Other specific action items from the DA will be discussed in the next newsletter.

Summer has finally arrived in the upper midwest, after winter continued right through the anticipated spring. I'm looking forward to some relaxation and time with my family and friends, and wish you the same. Take care.

Mary Jamin Maguire, President

Special Citations

Eva Dreikurs Ferguson (above) was honored by NASAP for her extensive work in spreading Adlerian ideas as an educator, writer, and overall communicator. Her plaque noted that through "her untiring willingness to share her knowledge at the university level and through NASAP and ICASSI, Adlerian ideas have been disseminated to every area of the globe."

David Lam (above), speaker at the Saturday luncheon in Vancouver, is the former Lt. Governor of British Columbia, the province's highest non-political leader. He received a citation stating: "Be it known to all that your unselfish giving of yourself, your respect for human dignity, your example of tolerance and acceptance of individual differences and your philanthropy in areas that advance human knowledge and understanding epitomizes Social Interest in action."

Call For Journal Editor

The three-year term of Gerald Mozdzierz, Theory & Research Editor, expires January, 1998. While the term may be automatically renewed for another three years, Mozdzierz has indicated he will not be able to continue to serve in this capacity. A call for applications is being issued.

Qualifications to be considered include: 1) evidence of substantial Adlerian activity (e.g., presentations at meetings, workshops, publications, etc.) and proven experience in writing or editing; 2) member of NASAP; 3) acceptance of the purposes of the Journal and willing to incorporate new perspectives; 4) academic background, if possible, and evidence of clerical support and ability to set up and administer an editorial office; 5) solid, scholarly knowledge of Individual Psychology, as well as how these principles are practiced in a myriad of professional settings; 6) solid knowledge of the field of psychology. A modest annual stipend for expenses is available to the Editor.

Interested applicants are asked to submit a vita with statement of interest to the Central Office at 65 E. Wacker Place, Suite 400, Chicago, IL 60601 by September 2.

Mosak Endowment Seeking Nominations

By Roseanne Boldt

The committee for the Harold H. Mosak Endowment for the Advancement of Adlerian Psychology is seeking nominations for the first annual award to be given to an individual, individuals, or a group to provide financial assistance for a special project that will promote and advance Adlerian Psychology in a significant and enduring way. The award will be presented in the fall and will include financial assistance ranging from $1,000 to $5,000, depending on the project or projects selected.

Please submit a brief description of the proposed project by July 15, 1997, including how it would be significant and enduring. Those nominating a project to be considered by the committee will be asked for a more detailed description.
